We collect no information about our visitor's domain, but we do collect information about our visitor's email address when available, and we may collect aggregate (general tracking) information about pages visited.

The information we collect is:

- Used for internal review, tracking, or contacting and is then archived for future reference.
- Used for improving the quality of our website content and overall user experience.
- Used for communication purposes, including newsletters, emails or periodic offers from our company. Recipients can opt out from receiving this information by contacting us via the email address provided above,
- Not Shared with any outside organization for commercial purposes; however, we may share this information for tracking and other non-commercial purposes.

We may use a standard technology called a cookie for recording session information for shopping cart or other related purposes.

When an order is placed on our site, visitors will be directed to a shopping cart system where information such as name, address and credit card number will be collected for order processing. Our third-party payment processor will share with us the information needed for order fulfillment, but will not share credit card and related payment data with us.

We do not partner or use any 3rd party ad services or content delivering services.

With respect to sensitive information, we will redirect visitors to a secure page either on our site, or to a trusted 3rd party site before transferring or receiving sensitive data. This information may include credit card or other sensitive information.

For questions regarding our privacy policy or website in general, please contact us by email or phone as listed above.
